A Taste Of Saigon

A Journey Through Time

In the heart of Saigon's winding alleyways brimming with ancient heritage, you will find A Taste of Saigon - a culinary gem nestled within a nearly 100-year-old edifice at 42 Ton That Thiep Street. Our restaurant embodies Saigon's unique culture of breathing new life into historic structures.

Built by the wealthy Chinese merchant Hui Bon Hoa, nicknamed "Chú Hoả", the building housing A Taste of Saigon is a piece of living history. For generations, Vietnamese families have called this place home, witnessing Saigon's transformation over decades.

Taste Through the Centuries Within Saigon's 100-Year Culinary Walls

Saigon ingeniously repurposes ancient buildings to house modern restaurants, shops, cafes and galleries. This integration of contemporary life within timeworn walls gives the city its distinctive charm.

A Taste of Saigon proudly continues this tradition, offering authentic Saigonese cuisine served amidst incredible antiquity. As you enter, you can't help but imagine the historical secrets this resilient structure has witnessed of Saigon's turbulent past and Chú Hoả's real estate endeavors in his heyday. His company constructed numerous affordable housing units, giving rise to the expression "đi tàu chú Hỷ, ở nhà Chú Hoả" - the best place to live was on Chú Hoả's streets.

But A Taste of Saigon is more than just a historic setting. The restaurant proudly inherits Saigon's diverse culinary heritage through an extensive menu of time-honored local specialties passed down over generations.

From the iconic Saigon grilled pork vermicelli to fragrant broken rice dishes, every bite encapsulates the myriad cultural influences that have shaped this city's unique food culture.

Allow yourself to be transported through time as you dine amidst century-old elegance. Savor the enduring flavors and heritage of Saigon, while surrounded by remnants transcending eras. At A Taste of Saigon, history has never tasted so delightfully delicious.
